For over two decades, Angiologia e Cirurgia Vascular (ACV Journal) has consistently committed to publishing high-quality, peer-reviewed scientific content. Each original study, review, and case report appearing in our issues undergoes a rigorous evaluation process, with a minimum of two independent reviewers assessing each submission under a double-blind review protocol.

This essential task is carried out by a distinguished and dedicated cohort of reviewers, whose voluntary contributions significantly shape the relevance and scientific integrity of the Journal's content. Their role is indispensable in ensuring the excellence and credibility of our publication, and their efforts are recognized with profound appreciation by both the Editorial Board and contributing authors.

In light of the Journal's evolving profile—including a steady flow in manuscript submissions and the transition to exclusive English-language content for all materials except selected editorials and letters—reviewers' contributions have become even more critical. As the standards for scientific quality continue to rise, so too does our reliance on the expertise and dedication of our reviewers. The ongoing success and growing prestige of the ACV Journal are inextricably linked to their competence and commitment.

Moreover, systematic evaluation of reviewer performance enables us to enhance the composition of the Editorial Board by inviting those who demonstrate consistent excellence and engagement to participate more actively in the Journal's strategic direction. This approach ensures that our editorial structure evolves in alignment with the highest standards of publishing.

We take this opportunity to formally acknowledge and express our sincere gratitude to the reviewers listed below for their outstanding service and invaluable contributions throughout the year 2024:
